ABOUT EMC

EMC is a charity with a national and international reputation for excellence which this year celebrates 50 years supporting English and Media teachers through publications, training, student magazines and consultancy.

EMC offers:

- A varied professional development programme, including full-day in-person and online courses, short webinars and teacher conferences
- Print and downloadable publications
- emagazine and MediaMagazine, quarterly magazines for A Level students, with print & online subscriptions
- A PGCE in Media Studies, in conjunction with Goldsmiths, University of London
- Consultancy/advisory work
- Expert contributions to national initiatives and debates on English and Media teaching.

We're a small, dedicated team of qualified teachers, passionate about English and Media teaching and learning.

EMC receives no core funding. Our work is funded by our publications, courses, magazines, conferences and consultancy – all of which allow us to provide a bank of free resources and to carry out our advocacy work, ensuring we are able to provide support to as many teachers and students as possible.

WALDEGRAVE SCHOOL

The Awe and Wonder Scheme of Work encouraged students to explore their own relationship with the natural world and to develop their non-fiction writing voice.

At KS3, students can often be more confident with creative writing, but through reading and discussing various texts in this anthology they considered how different writers articulated their experiences in diverse ways. Pieces might be personal/political, informative/entertaining, playful/serious – each writer adapting their tone depending on the form and the intention of their piece. When students then went on to write their own blogs, articles, journals they crafted their pieces according to how they wanted to portray their experience with nature. I think that this unit will become a touchstone for teaching non-fiction writing and for facilitating students to find their voice.

Maddie Lynes

I've attended a number of EMC courses, both online and in person. Every time I come away with renewed enthusiasm for my job as an English teacher, a bundle of resources I can apply the next day in the classroom and a notebook brimming with big ideas to share with my department. EMC CPD helps you become a better teacher, but their courses also remind you why you became an English teacher in the first place.

Elen Lee Lewis

With Heads of English under pressure to get great exam results and quantify students' learning, our time can get eaten up by things that don't truly help students succeed in English. EMC's CPD courses and resources give us the inspiration and practical ideas that mean we never lose sight of what matters in English teaching. We're often talking about 'the EMC way' in the English office – empowering students to form their own interpretations and be part of the great conversation that is our subject.

Katie Nowicki

JO RICHARDSON COMMUNITY SCHOOL

EMC's work has informed much of my curriculum development, including upskilling staff; it has helped us prepare to deal with Ofsted, to move towards mixed-ability teaching and to make the argument of talk and discussion being central to the English classroom. EMC inspires, illuminates and equips teachers to make their subject come alive for their students.

Anurag Jain, Director of Learning

Attending EMC's 'Refresh Your Approach to Othello for A Level Literature' course reignited my own passion for the play and left me feeling confident and ready to teach it at Key Stage 5. Each session guided me seamlessly between close textual analysis and a broader overview of the play, enriching my insight into the formulation of critical, creative and performance-based activities.

Clare Adu, Reading Co-ordinator

The English and Media Centre has transformed the way I think about assessment, curriculum, and what it means to be both a teacher and a student of English. Perhaps most importantly, the organisation has helped enrich the literary lives of our students. Anthologies such as Iridescent Adolescent have breathed life into our reading lists, introducing powerful, affecting texts like An Account of the Decline of the Great Auk and Tomorrow is Too Far – stories that stay with students long after the lesson ends. The EMC doesn't just lead professional development – it shapes national conversations about what English teaching can and should be.

Charlotte Meehan, Key Stage 3 Co-ordinator for English

As a teacher, there's nothing quite as valuable as stepping into the shoes of a student once again. Recently, I had the opportunity to participate in a Hamlet-focused workshop, and it was a transformative experience that deepened my appreciation for both the material and the art of teaching.

Shelina Khanom, KS5 Co-ordinator

EMC COURSES

All EMC courses, whether online or in-person, bring to life the beliefs and practices at the heart of EMC's approach to English teaching and learning:

- Joy, curiosity and pleasure at the heart of learning
- The importance of student voice
- Collaborative practice as best practice, for both students and teachers
- A diverse curriculum as an entitlement for all
- Education that is just and inclusive
- Practice informed by principles and principles informed by practice.

Feedback from previous courses

An inspiring course – reignited my enthusiasm for teaching writing at GCSE.

Anna Weinman,
Davison High School

It was amazing: full of practical suggestions; lots of practical take-aways; fabulous resources. I feel inspired and re-energised.

Emma Downton,
Brentford School for Girls

A fantastic course, hugely enjoyable, informative and helpful! I thought all the presenters were brilliant. Thank you!!

Hazel Dempster,
School 21

Fantastic! Really interesting, fab activities. I feel like I'm going away with practical strategies and renewed enthusiasm.

Kate Buckley, Peter Symonds College

The course was insightful, rich with practical ideas and activities as well as bigger thinking strategies.

Natalie Kyriakidou, The Foley's School

Course leaders were inspiring in their delivery and creative ideas. I feel re-energised to address the transition and support learners to enjoy A Level English!

Katie Hogan, Barton Court Grammar School

FULL-DAY COURSES – IN-PERSON & ONLINE

Immerse yourself in a day of deep thinking, with a chance to learn with and from colleagues and course leaders alike.

Past in-person and online courses have focused on:

- Reading and writing across all key stages
- Success at GCSE
- Assessment
- Key aspects of English Literature, including a focus on particular texts at GCSE and A Level
- Key aspects of A Level English Language
- Media production
- Media theory
- Starting to teach A Level Literature, Language, Lang/Lit, and Media
- Developing practice as an ECT or English non-specialist.

The course did absolutely everything I hoped it would. I feel prepared to tackle prose, poetry and drama pieces with insightful and exciting tasks to use with students in lessons.

Lydia Petrucci,
Princethorpe College

High quality resources and presenters. Enjoyed interactivity with opportunities to contribute through chat.

Nick Wakeling,
Colyton Grammar School

Most face-to-face courses take place at our beautiful base, five minutes' walk from Waterloo Station and Southwark tube. Occasionally we're able to schedule courses further afield in locations such as Leeds, Manchester and Bristol.

WEBINARS

Join us for some bitesize learning at one of our popular afternoon webinars. These sessions are refreshingly interactive, with teachers sharing their own expertise via chat, polls and Q&A.

Recent webinar topics include:

- Novels at KS3
- Shakespeare through Film
- Non-fiction Writing at KS3
- Approaches to Poems of the Decade
- The New and Aspiring Head of Department

TEACHER CONFERENCES

EMC teacher conferences are a fabulous way to learn about a key aspect of your subject in a glorious setting. Surrounded by fellow professionals, you'll experience a mix of keynotes, panels and breakout sessions, featuring teachers, academics, writers and members of the EMC team.

Recent in-person teacher conferences have focused on:

- Assessment
- Reading and Writing for Pleasure
- Oracy
- Inclusion.

This was a conference from which I returned invigorated and enthusiastic: the speakers were inspiring, the workshops were well planned and the take home materials were practical and immediately useful.

Jim Shaw, Wakefield Girls' High School

I thoroughly enjoyed the conference – all speakers were exceptional, the sessions hugely useful, and the organisation of the day excellent. I appreciated the level of interactivity especially, and the chance to share experiences with other attendees.

Hannah Bergin, Charters School

It was a fantastic day. The depth of knowledge and experience was outstanding. Thank you for keeping the discourse alive and for giving us the opportunity to share and inspire. I have taught for many years and I am still excited to be part of the English teaching community because the passion and expertise clearly continues to thrive in this challenging climate.

Nancy Nicholls, St Peter's School
Bournemouth

This was a brilliant conference. The strategies and information were refreshingly exciting and user friendly.

Lydia Henry-Cross, Chilwell School

PGCE – TRAIN TO TEACH MEDIA STUDIES

WITH EMC & GOLDSMITHS, UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

EMC runs a PGCE Media and Film in partnership with Goldsmiths, University of London. It's the only university-based route into Media and Film Studies teaching.

The training offered is underpinned by EMC's core principles and practices, with trainees encouraged to:

- Promote media literacy and critical thinking
- Nurture creativity and confidence
- Value and build on the media consumption habits of the students they teach
- Be informed by a balance of research evidence, teacher reflection and personal judgement
- Combine theory and practice, embedding the creation of media texts through low-stakes practical tasks as a way of developing a deeper understanding.

Our PGCE trainees benefit from our links with The BFI, the Guardian and the Media Education Association and many of them continue to be involved in the wider work of EMC, regularly attending CPD, conferences and participating in our media teacher networks and teachmeet events.

The Media PGCE completely transformed how I think about teaching and opened up so many opportunities for me. It challenged me to be a more adaptable and creative educator, balancing theory and practice while valuing students' own media experiences. The critical thinking and collaboration encouraged on the course have shaped not just my approach to teaching but most importantly, it connected me with a network of like-minded educators who continue to inspire and support me throughout my career.

Hafida Ali, Media Subject Lead, Winchmore School

Extensive professional knowledge and practice provided by the EMC team has given me the greatest opportunity in becoming a secondary Media teacher. I feel privileged to have been a part of the experience they have on offer!

Jack Lowe, Media Teacher, Cockburn John Charles Academy, Leeds

As a PGCE trainee, I was honoured to be affiliated with an organisation that is proactively promoting media literacy as well as providing quality support for teachers. EMC is guided by a team of competent and passionate staff and its mission extends beyond the four walls of the classroom to engage with the communication issues of our time.

Marine Guichard, International School of Paris

emagazine & MediaMagazine

FOR A LEVEL STUDENTS

Quarterly magazines for students of advanced level English Literature, Language and Lang & Lit and Media and Film Studies.

Engaging, accessible, relevant articles written by academics, practitioners and experts in their field – perfect for NEA inspiration and preparation, to stimulate classroom discussion, challenge ideas, fuel critical thinking and ensure students are in touch with the latest thinking in their field.

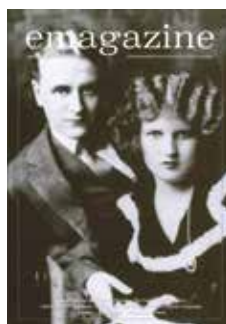

New subscribers to the website get immediate access to the subscription website – with no user limits per subscribing institution.

For anyone thinking of applying to read English at university it is indispensable.

Professor John Mullan, UCL

A fantastic resource that has followed me pretty much everywhere I have worked in education.

Jamie Cash, Confetti

This has been such a useful resource for me as a non-specialist and the students! Theory drop is brilliant!

Suzi Miles on Facebook

A fantastic springboard for helping students to develop their understanding of texts and critical perspectives. There's something about the combination of astute critical debate and the accessibility that gives my students the confidence to engage in their own intellectual risk taking.

Anna Shaw, Greenhead College

An extraordinary resource – the articles are thoughtful, informative and engaging and give A Level students a springboard to think about texts in a meaningful and insightful way. I cannot recommend it highly enough.

Varsha Shah, English teacher and author

We love the insights from experts in their field and particularly value how accessible the articles are for sixth form students.

Laura Burdon, English Curriculum Lead in a school in Gateshead

A LEVEL STUDENT CONFERENCES

- Featuring leading voices in Literature, Language and Media
- Enriching, inspiring and great fun
- Rooted in the A Level specifications while opening up new possibilities.

I loved the fact that it wasn't all about passing exams. It focussed more on celebrating poetry and poets and was therefore so much more enriching.

Lectures were accessible and thought-provoking. Lots of students came away with ideas for their NEAs.

Fantastic! The discussion of poetic form was brilliant and so wonderful for them to see such interesting, intellectual, creative and individual voices and minds.

The conference was a great opportunity for students to hear experts talking passionately about their area of research, which is good both for student motivation and to give them ideas for possible careers.

What Matters in English Teaching

Collected Blogs
and Other
Writing

On the 'messiness', the rigour, the importance of English, I can't think of a book I'd rather read about English teaching then, now, and in the future, than Barbara Bleiman's indispensable What Matters in English Teaching.

Geoff Barton, Twitter

Simply essential. Written with rigour, insight and criticality, this book sparks the conversations we need to be having about the stories we tell and how we tell them. This is a timely interrogation of representation and heritage in British literature.
